Module 4: Identifying Suspicious Transactions

What is a Suspicious Transaction?

A suspicious transaction is one that, in the judgment of a staff member, appears inconsistent with the customer's known profile, business, or stated source of funds. Examples include:

- Large cash deposits with no clear business justification
- Frequent transfers to high-risk jurisdictions
- A customer who avoids providing source of funds documentation
- Structuring — splitting large amounts into smaller transactions to avoid the EGP 50,000 cash reporting threshold

Politically Exposed Persons (PEPs)

A PEP is an individual who holds or has held a prominent public function. All PEP accounts require enhanced due diligence (EDD) and senior management approval before account opening. PEP status must be re-screened annually. Refer to the Compliance team any customer you believe may be a PEP.

Filing a Suspicious Transaction Report (STR)

If you identify suspicious activity, do NOT alert the customer. Complete the STR form on the Compliance portal and submit within 24 hours. STRs are filed with the Egyptian Money Laundering Combating Unit (EMLCU).
